About Me

Making websites at Princeton U since 2000.

Currently, manage a team of 16 (content strategists, designers, developers, and project managers).

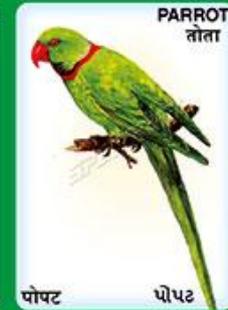

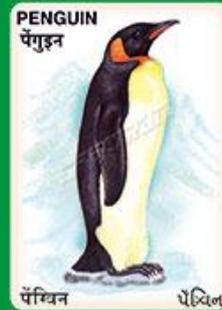

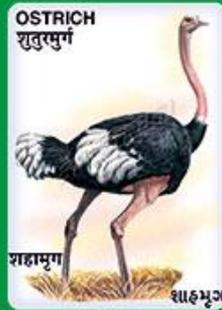

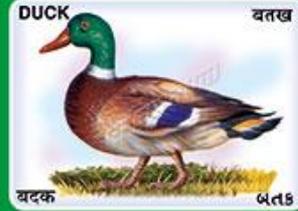

Started working with Drupal in 2010.

Eager to hear about your “tigers”.

Goals of this presentation

1. Things to consider when “inheriting” a website
2. Organized checklists - for you to adapt to your needs
3. Share case studies, positive/negative experiences

Drupal is a powerful content management system. There is often more than one way to achieve a goal.

Looking at the website from 3 lenses:

1. Business/product owner
  2. Content/design
  3. Technical

Checklists

Knowing you'll remember everything will free-up the brain space to use your creativity...safely.

Checklists

Feel free to fill in the blanks _____ and share with others.

Other Checklists

You may have encountered IT checklists for:

- Onboarding (onto a hosting platform, or a new staff member)
- Website launch checklist
- Skillset readiness
- Security
- Accessibility
- Troubleshooting

The lists

Copy them and adapt to your specific needs

The lists will be uploaded to the
DCNJ 2020 website:

Case Studies

In the past 12 months, the Web Development Services team inherited 2 websites which we didn't build.

We examined them from the Technical lense.

1. Clicked through as a website visitor.
  2. Ran an automated inventory.
  3. Mapped the content types to our default Drupal platform's content types.
  4. Decided to migrate the website to our platform.
